Ravens Cove

Mary Ann Poll

Welcome to Ravens Cove, Alaska, a tiny town nestled in a small hollow on the majestic Cook Inlet. A town familiar with storytelling—after all, Alaska abounds in rich legends. Unlike other tales, however, the account of Ravens Cove is not just based in fact. It is fact. Meet Josiah Williams, the peculiar stranger whose warning to lifetime residents Kat Tovlosky and her cousin, Sheriff Bart Andersen, raises more questions than answers; a man whose dark past and knowledge of the murders make him a suspect more than an ally. Join Kat and Bart as an unlikely troop forms (including a very unwelcome FBI agent) to discover the identity of a killer. The unearthing of which will throw the reluctant warriors into a battle for their very lives and the lives of all who call Ravens Cove home.

Alaskan, Mary Ann Poll, America's Lady of Supernatural Thrillers, is the award winning writer of the Alaska Iconoclast series. During her 25 years working in administration, writing in a technical capacity was an integral part of her profession. When a severe injury impeded her ability to work, she turned to creative writing. From an early age, the supernatural intrigued Mary Ann. Looking for answers and on a spiritual quest, she dabbled in many new age ideas. In the end, though, she came to Christ. Her natural curiosity regarding the supernatural and her belief come together in her novels. Alaska Iconoclast series illustrates how easily we want to believe that something so bad for us is good . . . or Satan himself masquerades as an angel of light. It is not surprising, then, if his servants masquerade as servants of righteousness. (2 Corinthians 11:14)
